

The Wood thrush, which nests only in hardwood forests of North America, is becoming fewer in number as more larger woodlands are cut into smaller ones. The Nature Conservancy of Michigan is a nonprofit organization that protects habitat for the wood thrush and many other increasingly rare animals and plants throughout the state. To join, call or write to the address below. Photo by Betty Darling Cottrille.

8-25-99
Dear Commissioner Henney,

I believe antibiotics have no place in livestock feed. When used thus, enable the consolidation of the meat industry as well as contributing significantly to diminishing effectiveness

The Nature Conservancy, Michigan Chapter
2840 E. Grand River Ave., Suite 5
East Lansing, MI 48823 (517) 332-1741

of anti-biotics
for disease control

Thank you for listening

Fielding Yost

Midland, MI

5 '99 SEP -3 10:57
Docket B Market Branch

HFA - 305

FDA

Rm 1061

5630 Fiske St.

Rockwell, Maryland

20852

99P-0485

C 1609

